North Olmsted upsets Demons

The upsets kept coming in the Southwestern Conference as host North Olmsted (9-6 overall, 5-4 SWC) knocked off league-leading Westlake 62-41 Saturday night.

The Eagles had three players in double figures led by Scott Maffett's 16 points. He was followed by Keith Bielzer (13) and Joe Smith (12) in the scoring column. Bielzer also nailed all 10 of his free throw attempts in the final quarter.

The Demons, who managed just 10 field goals the entire night — none in the third quarter — fell to 12-3 overall, and 7-2 in the league, getting 12 points from Jason Hamman in a losing effort.

OBERLIN

From D1
"I can't single out one person tonight," Harris said. "They all did their job. I played seven basically, but when I went to the bench, they kept on going."

Harris definitely would have a hard time commenting on individual players since five scored in double figures. Steve Hodge and Greg Thomas each finished with 14 points, while Howard Chambers, Antonio Barbra and DeQuan Thomas all had 13.

"Don't forget Michael Young," Harris said of his 6-foot-7 post player. "He might have only had five points, but he rebounded and played strong defense."

The Indians went on an 11-point run early in the game that was fueled by three inside baskets by Barbra. With Oberlin leading 12-2, dominating the boards and running smoothly in transition, the final score was not too difficult to determine.

At least the part about which team would win.

"Oberlin is definitely a different team from the last time we played them," Firelands coach Mike Horne said. "They took it right from the beginning with rebounding and transition baskets. Before we could blink an eye we were down by 10. And from there it steamrolled. Joe Harris has definitely done a nice job with them."

Although the Falcons closed to within six at 33-27 as senior Matt Varndell began to score in the second period, the Indians went on a 14-3 tear to end the half with a 47-30 lead. It could have been even more since Hodge's slam dunk was just beaten by the buzzer.

The lead continued to mount throughout the third quarter, ultimately reaching 70-37. The final at, though, was not likely to please them.

While owners want a plan to slow the salary spiral, the players seem more intent on merely raising money for revenue sharing.

As a result, for example, the Kansas City Royals would pay $12 million under the owners' latest plan, but nothing under the players' proposal. And the New York Yankees, who would've paid $4.6 million under the players' previous plan, would now pay about $4.7 million.

"If they give us a proposal and there's no movement, we can close up shop," Atlanta Braves president Stan Kasten said shortly before the sides met for the first time in the day.

"All of America will be disappointed. The President will be disappointed if there's no movement," he said.

Money raised from the owners' luxury tax would go to the players' benefit plan. Players claim that if the tax is too high, it will act as a cap and limit salaries.

Clinton has threatened to have Usery propose terms of a settlement if the sides cannot reach an agreement on their own.

Clinton would like a settlement in time to avoid the use of replacement players. Those familiar with his sentiment say he would prefer baseball not start the season with strikebreakers.

Teams have been signing replacements, with Oil Can Boyd, Herm Winingham and possibly Gorman Thomas among them. On Friday night, management said the dropping of the salary cap system had no effect on plans to begin spring training with replacements, if necessary.

Spring training is supposed to start Feb. 16. The exhibition season is scheduled to begin the first week of March, and owners are still hoping to resolve a lockout of major league umpires before those games begin.

WEST

lead had shrunk to three points, 47-44, as West committed seven turnovers after having only six through three periods.

Rodak's parade to the line was good for 11 of 13 and Keystone managed to hit two other free throws with the clock stopped.

Helbig sprang open to hit his final three from the far left side with 1:10 left to tie the game at 47 — the first time the game was even since an 11-11 tie in the first period.

Crutcher stepped up, however, hitting two big baskets around a Helbig driving layup that put West in front with seven seconds left.

Three timeouts, two by Keystone and one in between by West, set the stage for Keystone's final attempt. They got the ball into Rodak as planned, but he was double-teamed and had the ball slapped away by Rob Woolbright with less than three seconds remaining.

This time, Helbig took the inbound pass but missed off the right side of the rim.

"He steps up big," Mohr said of Crutcher. "Two, four, six, eight, 10, 11 points in the fourth quarter. The good thing is, the kids got him the ball. They recognize he's the guy we have to go to."

Crutcher finished with 26 points, his second straight at that figure. Mahone added a dozen. Helbig had 17 for the 'Cats.

"It was good to come in here and win," said Mohr, saluting the loud, packed Keystone gym. "It was good to win with what we were up against. And, it was good to win at the tempo we had to play at."

"It kills us," said Morgan of the loss. "I don't count us out of going over there (to Oberlin) and beating them but that's a big task. We beat them once and anybody would say 'we split with them and walk away from it.' No one else will beat them. If we're going to win the conference, we'll have to win out."
