Players' association suspects more collusion

The Associated Press

The baseball players' association has asked agents to keep detailed records of negotiations involving free agents, a possible prelude to another collusion case against owners.

Several agents have told the union their clients received similar offers from several different teams, three agents said this week on the condition they not be identified.

Union officials asked them to maintain the records of the bids, and the three agents said the union was contemplating a collusion grievance. Baseball's labor contract says teams may not act in concert with regard to free agents.

In the 1980s, owners were found by arbitrators to have conspired against free agents during these offseasons, and management settled those cases in 1990 for $200 million. The union would not comment on the possibility of a collusion case, and Gene Orza, the association's general counsel, said Friday that requesting agents to keep records was not unusual. The agents, however, said the union has never asked for such records more than in recent years.

"Asking agents to keep good notes of negotiating meetings is nothing new," said Orza, the union's No. 2 official. "We've been doing it for the last 15 years. It's the way we monitor the market. The operation of the free-agent market is always a concern for us."

While agents point to the relative lack of bidders for high-profile free agents such as Greg Maddux, Jim Thome and Ivan Rodriguez, management officials point to the aggressive bidding for free agents by the Philadelphia Phillies, New York Yankees, New York Mets, Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs.

Management also says the weak economy has caused clubs to renege and that the lack of top free agents in the primes of their careers has hurt prices.

"Any thought there has been any violation of our newly negotiated collective bargaining agreement is both disappointing and farfetched," said Bob Duvall, baseball's chief operating officer.

The market is behaving as it always does, reacting to economic stimuli and the quality of the players on the marketplace. There have been numerous free agents who have attracted attention from any number of teams, but it is not unequivocally true that there has been nothing done in contravention of the Basic Agreement.

If owners are found to have violated their labor contract once again, the damages would be much larger than in the 1980s. The average salary in the major leagues increased from $12,000 in 1987 to $2.3 million last year, and since 1990 the labor contract has included a provision that any collusion damages be tripled.

Cubs sign reliever

Reliever Dave Vandy and the Chicago Cubs agreed Friday to a $2 million, one-year contract. Vandy, who pitched the last three seasons for the St. Louis Cardinals, is 34-34 with 94 saves and a 3.38 ERA in nine major-league seasons. He has appeared in at least 60 games seven times and has had an ERA of 3.70 or better seven times.

Rangers sign Thomson

Right-hander John Thomson and the Texas Rangers agreed to a $1.3 million, one-year contract. Thomson, who hasn't played in the American League or posted a winning season, went 9-14 with a 4.71 ERA in 20 starts last year with the Colorado Rockies and New York Mets.

M's, Collum agree

Seeking veteran leadership for the clubhouse and a strong left-handed reliever, the Seattle Mariners agreed to a two-year contract with utility reliever Greg Collum. Collum spent the last four seasons with the Arizona Diamondbacks. He played on the 2001 World Series championship team that also included new Mariners manager Bob Melvin as a bench coach.

Tanner joins Pirates as scout

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Chuck Tanner, who managed the Pittsburgh Pirates to a World Series title in 1979, has joined the Indians as a special assignment scout.

Tanner, 75, is beginning his 57th year in professional baseball. For the past 13 seasons, he has been a special assistant for the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Indians also hired Dean Watson on Friday as director of professional scouting/major league scout and promoted Mike Hazen to assistant director of professional scouting.

Hall of Famer Gillman dies

Sid Gillman, the Hall of Fame football coach who was one of the masterminds behind the West Coast offense used by several of the NFL's best teams, died early Friday. He was 91.

Gillman, who played at Ohio State, died at home in his sleep in Los Angeles, according to his wife. Gillman coached the Los Angeles Rams from 1955-59 and the Chargers in Los Angeles and San Diego from 1960-69 — their first 10 years of existence — and again in 1977. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1983 and also was a member of the National Football Hall of Fame.

In 18 years as coach of the Rams, Chargers and Houston Oilers, Gillman had a 123-107 record. He also was one of the first coaches to analyze game film to prepare strategy for opponents.

Donovan McNabb took all the snaps with Philadelphia's first-team offense again, moving closer to starting the Eagles' first playoff game next week-end. Practice again was closed to reporters, and McNabb walked with a slight limp on his way to the locker room.

An arrest warrant has been issued for former Atlanta Falcons wide receiver Andre Rison for failing to pay child support. Court records indicate the 35-year-old Rison owes his ex-wife, Tonya, about $68,500 in support for their teenage son.

Tom Coughlin flew to Cincinnati to interview for the Bengals coaching job. Coughlin, fired by the Jacksonville Jaguars, is one of five reported candidates for the Cincinnati job. Also in the mix are Washington defensive coordinator Marvin Lewis, Pittsburgh offensive coordinator Mike Mularczyk and two Bengals assistants — defensive coordinator Mark Duffner and running backs coach Jim Anderson.

Former Nebraska football player Abdul Muhammad has pleaded guilty to being a felon in possession of a deadly weapon. The plea was part of an agreement reached in U.S. District Court. Muhammad had entered a plea of not guilty in July. The charges stemmed from the March 2001 slaying of Robert A. Taylor IV, a former gang member who later advocated gang truces. Muhammad had been considered a suspect in the case which remains unsolved.

Pro scouts project Louisville defensive end Dewayne White as a second-round draft choice and that made him decide to skip his senior season and enter the NFL draft.

Boise State receiver Lou Fautsch was charged with resisting arrest and obstructing justice after trying to stop police from arresting a juvenile involved in a fight with a minor league baseball retiree.

Basketball: Driesell retires
In his family, downhome David, Lefty Driesell gave a simple reason for retiring after four decades as one of the nation's most successful college basketball coaches. He's tired. Driesell, who turned 71 on Monday, stepped down from Georgia State, finishing with 786 victories — fifth-most on the Division I list and third among active coaches. His teams played in the NCAA tournament 13 times.

Baseball: Canseco, brother sued
Former American League MVP Jose Canseco and his twin brother are being sued for at least $1 million for beating a California man during a Miami Beach barroom brawl. Christian Presley of Laguna Beach, Calif., sued Canseco and his brother Ozzie for battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and conspiracy to commit battery. He filed suit Tuesday in Miami's Circuit Court.

Hockey: NHL suspends Kozlov
Atlanta Thrashers right wing Slava Kozlov was suspended for three games by the NHL for hitting an official during a game against the Ottawa Senators.

The troubled Ottawa Senators could have a new financing plan in place by the middle of next week, NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said.

Toronto Maple Leafs forward Mikael Renberg's left hand became so inflamed this week that doctors considered amputating it to save his life. Renberg aggravated a blister on his hand while trying to tie his skates in Edmonton last Saturday. The hand became infected and landed him in a Vancouver hospital with a 104-degree fever.

The performances of Seales and Gansley helped pick up the slack for junior Dan Binggeli, who struggled early.

"Today you saw something rare. Dan Binggeli not playing well for an entire game," Donahue said. "But that's what we expect. We have four guys who can score."

Jamar. Steve. Dan. (senior) Tim Curran, any one of them can score 20 points, and it all depends on the situation."

Binggeli finished with only nine points, but had four steals.
