NEWSWATCH

Asthma, enlarged heart cited in player's death

The Columbus, Ind., high school basketball star who collapsed and died during a tournament game Friday night had a heart attack and had suffered from asthma, said his mother.

The 7-foot senior, who had signed to play for Kentucky, collapsed during the third quarter of a Class 4A regional game at Columbus North High. He was treated on the court and then taken to Columbus Regional Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

His mother, Felicia, said a heart attack killed her son, who had used inhalers because he was asthmatic.

The Bartholomew County coroner, Joyce Fisher, said Stewart had had an enlarged heart. The official cause of death would not be known until after an autopsy.

"John was the neatest young man I've ever coached," said Lawrence North coach Lawrence Keefe.

Speaking after his team's NCAA Tournament game Friday night, Kentucky coach Tubby Smith was emotional, choking up while talking about Stewart.

"It puts playing a game in perspective because life is so fragile for these young men," Smith said. "This was a beautiful young man from a great family who was so looking forward to being part of Kentucky, which he always will be."

"Our hearts go out to his loved ones. I think all the guys [on the team] felt like he was already part of Kentucky."
