

March 12, 1957

[illegible]

The river reached its highest recorded level shortly after dawn, overtopping the earthen embankment near the courthouse and sending water into the business district within the hour. The river reached its highest recorded level shortly after dawn, overtopping the earthen embankment near the courthouse and sending water into the business district within the hour. The river reached its highest recorded level shortly after dawn, overtopping the earthen embankment near the courthouse and sending water into the business district within the hour. The river reached its highest recorded level shortly after dawn, overtopping the earthen embankment near the courthouse and sending water into the business district within the hour.