

SOUTHWESTERN CONFERENCE GIRLS

THE TOP PLAYERS

Audra Mihalic, Amherst

What can you say? With 17 points and six assists, Mihalic meant 46 points a game to the Cornets last year — and was SWC player of the year. She also averaged four steals. She's one of the best in Northeast Ohio and she'll play a key role in the Cornets' effort to win an SWC championship.

Kelsey Slater, Westlake

One of the best overall players in the area, Slater carries the Demons at both ends of the floor. And her experience and knowledge of the game make her an on-court extension of coach Chip Weiss.

Kym Wenz and Annette Ilg, Avon Lake

Coach Amy Manco likes guards in general, but she especially likes Wenz and Ilg this year. They'll be keys in the Shoregals' drive to win the outright championship and not share it with Bay. It's their last shot. Bay leaves the SWC next season.

Jackie Mahon, North Olmsted

She doesn't score a lot, but Mahon means more to the Eagles than just points. She averaged more than five assists a game and made a couple of dozen steals last year on a team that played .333 basketball.

Addie Mental, Olmsted Falls

Mental led the Bulldogs in scoring, assists and steals last season, and if she were a little taller than 5-5, she might have been near the top of the rebounding list.

THE TOP TEAMS

Amherst

Everyone talks about Mihalic, but look who the Cornets have found. It's Sasha Samara, a 5-10 junior transfer from Rocky River. She might not make fans forget the graduated Ashley Wallace, but she'll help fill her shoes in the post. The young Cornets (no seniors) will be contenders — and a lot of fun to watch.

Bay

The Rockets advanced to a regional final last March, the furthest a Bay girls team has ever gone. They lost Karina Kendrick, who averaged a double-double last season, but they return outside shooting threat Jessica Lauerhass and junior Paris Pugliese, who does just about everything, along with five other players 6-foot or taller.

Avon Lake

It may be the final season for the great old Avon Lake-Bay battles for the SWC crown, but it should be no less interesting. The Shoregals have two of the best guards in the area in Wenz and Ilg — and perhaps the finest basketball tradition.

Westlake

They don't have impressive height, but the Demons have impressive experience with players who contended for SWC championships in years gone by. Their experienced players are all 5-8 and under and their taller players are all inexperienced. But watch them play defense all over the floor. It could be interesting.

North Olmsted

The Eagles are balanced and a very athletic team. But they also have depth, and that could win some games for them this season. And seniors Jackie Mahon, Mary Geiger, Shelby Wiedt and Tanya Swansegar give them strong leadership on the floor.
